“Who is Telling All the Stories:
The Role of Television in the Culture of Violence”

George Gerbner, Professor Emeritus of Communications at the Annenberg School of the University of Pennsylvania

George Gerbner believes that the challenge of the new media age is the increasing monopolization, homogenization, and globalization of the cultural environment in which we all live. The discussion will focus on TV violence as a case in point, the market system that drives it, and how we can confront the challenge. An action program will be presented.
