The Marlin Fitzwater Center for Communication at Franklin Pierce College will serve students and faculty in Mass Communication, which is the College's largest academic major. The facility will encompass nearly 12,000 square feet and will be constructed above the College's Library Resource Center. The Fitzwater Center for Communication will provide classroom and interactive journalism labs, faculty offices, an auditorium/lecture hall, and state-of-the-art production and editing studios. It will set the College apart as a liberal arts community dedicated to leadership in the Mass Communication discipline and its associated fields.

"I want the Fitzwater Center to bring the most advanced thinking to bear on the communications issues of the day. We want everyone to know that Franklin Pierce produces communications graduates of intellect and character, men and women of conscience who can be trusted to interpret the event of the world with integrity and insight."
